Finding the Right Egg Donor

We understand how important this decision is and our team at Egg Helpers is committed to supporting you throughout the decision-making and donation process.

Our egg donors are creative, bright, giving, well-educated, and motivated by a desire to help someone become a parent. We seek healthy candidates whose families do not have genetic problems that could be passed on to a child, and eliminate those who have medical and social histories that make them unacceptable to be egg donors.

Egg donor candidates receive complete information about the egg retrieval process and any complications that could occur. Each candidate meets with a psychologist who provides a report about their mental suitability for being a egg donor.

Our donor screening process is just one of the ways our program at Egg Helpers can give you the greatest chance of success in starting or expanding your family.

Anonymous vs Known Egg Donations

ANONYMOUS CYCLE DONATION

In an anonymous donation, the recipients and egg donor’s identities will remain confidential and no identifying information will be exchanged. You will never meet or know each other’s names. Only relevant information will be provided about the donor, including medical and genetic history, description of their physical characteristics, photographs of the donor, and photographs of their children (if applicable).

The information shared with your donor will be the clinic location, your marital status (single or partnered), and if you will be requiring a surrogate to carry the pregnancy.

After speaking with a social worker or psychologist at the fertility clinic, most intended parents and egg donors are most comfortable and choose to move forward with an anonymous donation.

KNOWN CYCLE DONATION

In a known donation, all parties have agreed to disclose information about each other such as last names, locations, occupations, etc. The recipient parents and the egg donor may choose to meet either virtually or in-person before the egg retrieval takes place. Everyone is mutually interested in maintaining contact, potentially throughout the life of the children born as a result of the donation.

In a known donation, it is important that all parties have discussed their long-term expectations of the relationship and what the donor’s future relationship will be with the children.

There are many issues to consider when choosing a known donation, but it can be a wonderfully positive experience for the recipient parents, the egg donor, and any future children that may result.
